The Islamic Society of North America (ISNA) is an independent American religious organization registered in the state of Indiana. ISNA is governed by a 12-member democratically elected North American board of directors comprising of men and women, 3 board-appointed North American zonal representatives, 1 Past President, and 7 North American constituent organization representatives. ISNA and its constituent organizations have served Muslims of North America for 50 years. ISNA is the largest and oldest national Islamic umbrella organizations in the nation. It attracts tens of thousands of Muslims at its annual convention and coordinates with several hundred mosques and Islamic schools across North America. ISNA is engaged in regular interfaith, government relations, social services, and community service, working with people of all faiths to promote peace, mutual respect, harmony, and compassion. ISNA's constituent organizations include The Muslim Students Association of the US & Canada (MSA), Muslim Youth of North America (MYNA), Council of Islamic Schools of North America (CISNA), North American Islamic Trust (NAIT), Association of Muslim Scientists & Engineers (AMSE), Islamic Medical Association of North America (IMANA), and Canadian Islamic Trust.
